Mary Louise Kandyba was born into a family of railroaders in the shadows of the steel mills on the Southeast side of Chicago. Her career as an attorney has, for over twenty five years, focused on litigation unique to these industrial concerns, particularly those engaged in transportation.

Mary Louise is an experienced litigator who has tried over 50 cases to verdict, including both jury and non-jury cases, as well as cases tried before administrative agencies. She has represented both plaintiffs and defendants in a variety of tort cases, ranging from automobile collisions, premises liability and workplace liability to Federal Employers' Liability Act cases and state worker's compensation matters. Mary Louise also handles a wide assortment of employment litigation, contract litigation and other commercial matters. She currently represents a number of short line railroads, and local and interstate trucking companies, along with other closely held corporations, on various litigated matters.
